Approve the Bill.

The Commissioners today approved the general purposes of Senate bill 1305, to amend an act relating to the incorporation of certain corporations within the District of Columbia. The first proviso of the bill is for the relief of the Union Security Company, which was organized last February. The capital stock was put at $1,000,000, the minimum amount authorized by the act. It was found impossible to raise that much, and the bill was introduced to get a reduction in the capital stock.

The Omladina, it will be recalled, is the society that owed its origin to Rudolph Mrva, who was assassinated a short time ago by some of the members, who, it is said, had learned that Mrva was an agent said, had learned that Mrva was an agent provacateur of the police, and was engaged in systematically betraying the members of the society to the authorities. In consequence of the discovery of the connection of the Omladina with the anarchists, the prosecution of the members of the latter organ-ization now under arrest here will be post-poned until after the trial of the members of the Omladina now in custody, as it is thought that much of the testimony in the latter case can be used to convict the an-archists. It adds that unless some superior authority comes to the rescue, the prospects of any British exhibitor getting his goods back safely are extremely remote. The forwarding agents state that it was fully three weeks after the closing of the exhibition that they got possession of the package cases for the goods to be sent back to England. It is reported, Truth says, that the Columbian guards were withdrawn on January 1, leaving the buildings free to looters.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.-The colonial office states that the recent mutiny in the Cameroons was entirely due to the improper absence of the German gunboat Hyaiene, which had gone off on a cruise for the benefit of health of her officers and crew. The leaders of the mutiny were Dahomeyans who had formerly been slaves and who were serving the Germans in return for the price paid for their It is stated that Lieut. Morgen or Baron Stetin will probably be appointed governor of the Cameroons.

In 1864 dash racing was inaugurated at Saratoga as an experiment, and in imitation of a like sport that had gradually been growing in public favor in England. John Morrissey was one of the moving spirits in the venture, and society at the springs, then as now, was quick to patronize everything labeled English. The system proved a howing success from the start. Recognizing its popularity, the shrewd turfman, Leonard Jerome, back-ed by August Belmont, William Astor and others, founded Jerome Park. Mr. Belmont's idea in adopting it, however, was not to make money, but to afford sport in which gentlemen could indulge.

While Jerome Park was a silk stocking organization, and heavily patronized by the wealthy class, Morrissey, at Saratoga, catered to the populace and daily coined the dollars. He was shrewd enough to see that the public preferred to witness five short races in an afternoon, instead of two long ones. Contests between two-year-olds was also encouraged. ones. Bookmaking was an essential feature of money making, and the Monmouth Park Association was the first in the racing annals of the United States to openly proclaim that it was not doing business solely for its health, but for the money that was in it. Then followed in succession the brood known as the Brighton Beach and Sheepshead Bay associations. In the meantime the passion of gambling In the meantime the passion of gambling had been stimulated to a white heat among the middle and lower classes, until there had been created a constituency of gamblers, male and female, that reached far into the thousands in New York and within a radius of sixty miles of the several race tracks. The passion of gambling became a craving one. It did not take the associations named long to see that patronage for continuous racing could be had. Then it was that winter racing was added to the program at the tracks controlled Then it was that winter racing was added to the program at the tracks controlled by the several associations, the revenue being mainly derived from the percentage paid by bookmakers to do business, who could afford to pay large sums, when they got 99 per cent on the average, while the bettors only got one. The "boodle package" was a roll of paper wrapped around with a $1 bill.

Wetherell stated that the woman was his wife and that they had stopped at the Ash-ton House, but denied that either had done or intended doing wrong. He said he was a bookmaker, thrown out of employm by the stoppage of betting at the Ivy City track. He could give no satisfactory ex-planation as to the gimlet, door hook or "boodle package."

"What do you want done with this cou-ple?" asked the court of Prosecuting Attorney Pugh. "I will be satisfied if they leave town at once," replied Mr. Pugh.

That course met the approval of the court, and the couple were put under personal bonds to leave town at once, which they gladly agreed to do. Before being re-
